NUMBER OF DENSITY BONUS UNITS

The number of density bonus units to be granted shall be determined as follows:

1. A base factor for calculating the number of density bonus units shall be selected, based on the type of housing development, as follows:
 - a. For a common-interest development that provides target units for moderate-income households but do not otherwise meet the requirements of this section, the base factor shall be .05.
 - b. For housing developments that include donations of land to construct housing for very-low income households but do not otherwise meet the requirements of this section, the base factor shall be .15.
 - c. For other housing developments that meet the requirements of this section, the base factor shall be .20.
2. The base factor shall be adjusted, up to a maximum of .35, for projects that provide any of the following:
 - a. For a housing development that provides more than 10 percent of the total units as target units for low-income households, each 1 percent increase shall increase the base factor by .015.
 - b. For a housing development that provides more than 5 percent of the total units as target units for very-low-income households, each 1 percent increase shall increase the base factor by .025.
 - c. For a common-interest development that provides more than 10 percent of the total units as target units for moderate-income households, each 1 percent increase shall increase the base factor by .01.
 - d. For donations of land to construct housing for very-low-income households, if the area of land donated is larger than the minimum required area, each 1 percent increase in the size of the land donation shall increase the base factor by .01.
3. The minimum number of density bonus units to be granted shall be the maximum residential density for the site, multiplied by the adjusted base factor. Any fraction shall be rounded up to the next whole number.
4. The density bonus units shall not be included when determining the number of target units required to qualify for a density bonus.
5. If a housing development is otherwise eligible for a density bonus under the provisions of this section; the development includes a child day care facility other than a family day care home, including but not limited to an infant center, preschool, extended day care facility or school-age child care center, that will be located on the premises of, as part of or adjacent to the development; and the City does not find, based upon substantial evidence, that the community has adequate child care facilities, the applicant may receive an additional density bonus that is a number of square feet of residential space equal to or greater than the number of square feet in the child care facility.

The Community Development Department operates on a full cost recovery for processing of permits. Staff will charge their time and any expenses associated with processing the application against the initial deposit. Fees that have been captured for the reimbursement of City expenses are non-refundable.

Technology cost recovery fees are non-refundable
